

LEGLESS MAN BURNS TO DEATH IN HIS SHOP

TAX LEGISLATION ENDS FOR THIS YEAR WITH TARIFF BILL

BONUS WILL BE PAID AND DEFICIT WILL HAVE TO WAIT.

BRITISH INTEREST Treasury Certificates Will Add to the Needed Money of Government.

By DAVID LAWRENCE. Copyright, 1932, by The Janesville Gazette.

Washington—Agreement between President Harding and administration leaders over the financing of the government deficit as well as the handling of the bonus issue appears to be in sight.

Definite plans are being made which will bring President Harding and leaders of the House and Senate into action and allow passage of a bonus bill within the next few weeks.

Mr. Harding has not yet consented to the plan but has encouraged Senate leaders to work it out in detail and confer further with him about it.

First of all the plan provides for the payment of a bonus to ex-service men this year. The president was told by Senator Watson of Indiana that there were enough votes to pass a bonus bill in the Senate and, indeed, to pass the House bill if that is the only measure submitted. In the face of a certain veto of the House bill Senator Watson and his associates are at work on a substitute which may win executive approval.

The process is complex but unless Secretary Mellon can find a serious flaw in it, the chances are it will go through. Here is the situation and the plan:

The Senate cannot originate revenue legislation but it can amend any act already providing for collection of revenue. So the pending tariff act will be used as a device to overcome constitutional objections. In the tariff bill will be written a clause empowering the treasury to issue certificates of indebtedness amounting to approximately $165,000,000 which is the sum of the bonus. The bonus will require the first year.

Kenosha—The last chapter in the grand jury clean-up of conditions in Kenosha county, was written just before noon Saturday when Peter Fisher, former district attorney of Kenosha county, prominent in Kenosha's professional life, was sentenced to a term of three years at hard labor in the prison at Waupun. The sentence was imposed by Judge Bolger, who promptly denied a motion for stay of execution and late this afternoon Fisher will go to the state prison to begin serving his sentence.

Fisher was convicted on several charges of accepting bribes and on one charge of embezzlement. He pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge and as a partial defense he made the case that the court sentenced on this charge was six months in the state prison.

On the various charges of bribery terms of from six months to three years were imposed, but the court ordered that all the sentences be served concurrently.

A Broadcasting Station

In Chicago, New York and practically all of the other big cities, huge radio broadcasting stations are maintained for the purpose of transmitting to the waiting radio fans, the latest news, music, etc. Each transmission reaches its tens of thousands of receiving sets in the various homes, stores, banks, etc.

Far surpassing the ability of any single person to make himself heard through ordinary efforts, the radio broadcasts find their way to tens of thousands of people in the same space of time that he would take to tell you or me.

The Janesville Gazette offers you the same means of telling your wants or of offering your things for sale, through its Classified Advertising columns. Every day 10,500 Classified advertisements are distributed amongst the people in this territory. What a vast market this opens up for one willing to take advantage of it.

Others Near Death in Los Angeles Hospital from Burns.

By Associated Press.

Los Angeles—Five deaths were reported Saturday in hospitals at Downey and Artesia, near here, as a result of the explosion Friday morning of a gasoline tank and tank wagon while scores were fighting a fire in a gasoline filling station at Downey. Five others, seriously burned, were reported in a critical condition at Downey and here.

A score or more other persons were burned in various degrees. A little fire started in the loss of the gasoline filling station at the edge of Downey, Friday, while a gasoline tank wagon was filling the large buried supply tanks.

A fire alarm brought scores, high school students and townsmen joining in the effort to extinguish the flames. Suddenly one of the tanks exploded, followed quickly by explosion of the truck. The fire fighters, who were working on the tank, developed in the liquid flames of more than 1,000 gallons of gasoline.

HOPE AT GENOA THAT U. S. WILL BE IN 2ND CONFERENCE

BRITISH ACCEPT SITUATION IN REGARD TO RUSS-GERMANS.

French Delegate Shocks Socialists by Lunching With King of Italy.

By Associated Press.

Genoa—Hope that a world conference, with the United States participating, will be held after the Genoa meeting, was expressed by the German chancellor, Dr. Brüning, at a meeting of Germanists Friday night. The Genoa conference itself is a step forward in the reconstruction of the world, he said, but this could not be completed without the United States.

Closed Russian Incident.

An English spokesman said a meeting of the entire British delegation this morning decided to consider the incident that had arisen out of the Russo-German treaty as definitely closed since Germany had accepted the humiliation inflicted upon her by agreeing not to participate in discussions concerning Russia.

The British spokesman said it would be unparliamentary to insist on further concessions. He was not sure, however, how far the French really intended to go with their protests against the German reply.

Actual work on a plan for the reconstruction of Russia was started Saturday by experts representing the soviet government, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Holland.

Cooled Russian Incident.

The heated politics surrounding the Russian problem has been cooled by Mr. Chicherin's note accepting in the main, the allied formula stating the terms on which the great powers are willing to resume business relations with Russia.

The single important point of difference between the Russians and the allied representatives is the unwillingness of the former to restore the free trade relations with Germany, property which has been nationalized or requisitioned by Russia, although they are willing to restore it to the former owners for their use.

French Recalcitrant.

The French delegation to the economic conference has submitted a protest against the German reply to the allied note in which the Germans stated that they were not prepared to discuss questions settled in the Russo-German treaty. The French contend that the Germans under their reply, may insist on discussing other Russian questions.

Russian Socialists.

HARRY HANDY IN HIS FLIVVER RODE TO SEE HARDING

By Associated Press.

Chicago—With the coal strike closing its third week of idleness for more than 600,000 miners, survey of some of the fields shows an accumulation of loaded cars on sidings with the market dull.

Central Illinois' operators today reported 2,500 loaded cars awaiting orders and southern Illinois, 3,628 more. The total in the entire Illinois fields is nearly 10,000.

Trade reports here show practically no demand for industrial or domestic coal except for use in steel plants and iron works. The market is very quiet.

In a report Friday by Secretary of Labor Davis to Attorney General Daugherty, only slight increases in coal prices were noted and the strike has little effect so far on the wholesale market. Trade estimates indicate there is on hand about 2,500,000 tons of the 53,000,000 on hand when the strike started, with about 20,000,000 tons being produced in the last three weeks in non-union fields. Weekly consumption is estimated at 7,000,000 tons.

C., since he left Janesville last September. Although without the use of his legs, which are contracted, Handy handles the machine by a system of hand levers invented by him. He shook hands with President Harding and Mrs. Harding at Washington Wednesday. He will probably return home in six weeks.

DIVER WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE 50 FEET BENEATH SEA WAVES

By Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash.—Battling for his life 50 feet beneath the surface of Puget Sound, Walter McCray, a diver, came out victorious Friday over a giant devil fish.

The monster wound its tentacles so tightly about McCray that the diver was unable to reach the knife he carried for protection. When the contact threatened to cut off the air supply, McCray through the submarine telephone called for a short steel wrecking bar. With this weapon the diver was able to pierce the body of the devil fish and at last, with man and monster still struggling desperately, McCray was drawn to the surface.

The devil fish attacked by other men had released its hold and disappeared beneath the water.

MCGOWAN VICTOR IN SUPREME COURT

Decision of Judge Grimm Reversed in Town of Milton Action.

Setting aside the action of Judge George Grimm, which affirmed the action of a court commissioner, the Wisconsin state supreme court, in a decision handed down this week, holds the town of Milton has not the right to dissolve proceedings, started before the railroad commission, for the purchase of the water plant of the McGowan Light and Power company, of Milton Junction. The preliminary injunction secured by the town of Milton, restraining the utility company from further action before the railroad commission to fix the price of the water, was reversed.

The McGowan company is a public utility corporation, engaged under an indefinite permit in supplying water to the town of Milton. The town officials later resolved to discontinue proceedings for the purchase of the plant and the matter was submitted to a vote of the electors, which sustained their action. Notice was filed with the railroad commission and the McGowan company, but the McGowan company, holding their first action to buy the plant, and continued their action to determine the amount to be paid for the plant and the matter was referred to the court commissioner. The action was taken to the Rock county circuit court by the McGowan company, but the McGowan company appealed to the supreme court which has reversed the decision of Judge George Grimm.

THIEVES STEAL CAR, STEAL THREE TIRES, THEN ABANDON IT

Mystery surrounds the theft of a Ford sedan on South High street Friday night, and its recovery Saturday morning on Oak Hill avenue. The car was stolen from a garage on South High street, owned by John Osgood, Prairie avenue, was taken sometime between 7 and 10:30 p. m.

Police investigation Saturday showed the front tires had been removed on Magnolia avenue just off Washington street. The car was then driven west to Oak Hill avenue and then south toward Linden where it was abandoned—nearly one-half mile from the point where the tires were taken off.

The loss is covered by insurance.

Railroad Upheld in Test Action

By Associated Press.

Chicago—Federal Judge George T. Page Saturday upheld the Pennsylvania railroad in its suit to test the power of the United States railroad labor board, by refusing to dismiss the temporary injunction, recently granted by Judge Landis, restraining the board from enforcing the road's violation of the board's decrees.

Judge Page, while refusing to dismiss the temporary injunction, ordered a conference of attorneys for both sides and the case probably will come up again later. The board ordered the road to hold new elections among its shop craft employees some time ago and the road refused to do so. The board then prepared to issue a decree enjoining the carrier and the Pennsylvania obtained the injunction to test the board's powers.

The shop craft had charged that the employees' representatives' who conferred with the road over proposed wage reductions, were selected by the road itself and not by the employees. They claimed the conferences therefore were illegal, and were upheld by the board.

The labor board never has claimed power to enforce its decrees, the enforcement being left under the transportation act to the moral responsibility placed on carriers and employees, through the decisions of an impartial body. The only power it claimed was to ensure publicly any body violating its decrees and it recently did this in connection with a small eastern road. The Pennsylvania maintained, however, that the board could not even ensure it.

Saturday's decision is not final, but it came as a distinct shock to the board. The members had confidently expected Judge Page would dismiss the temporary injunction and throw the cases out of court.

Continued search of family, friends and police throughout southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois has failed to disclose any trace of Mrs. Effie Dunwidde, 29 year old wife of A. R. Dunwidde, Juda.

Worrying over illness Mrs. Dunwidde left her home at Juda at 10 a. m. a week ago Friday, and went by bus to Milwaukee where she told her husband she would visit a dentist. She has not been seen since.

In the belief that she may have gone to Rockford to visit her sister, Mrs. Carl Hevlin, Mr. Dunwidde went to that city but could find no trace of her. He kept her disappearance secret until Friday, when police of nearby cities were asked to look for her.

The pitiful appeal of Bobbie, her son, has been sent to newspapers for publication. It is as follows:

"Mama, come home to us or let us know where you are. I know you will if you could see us. Just a word, mama, dear, so we can come to you. Do this, mama, dear, please."

From Bobbie and Papa.

Mrs. Dunwidde was given $5 by her husband when she left home, smartly dressed, to go to the dentist. Mr. Dunwidde is a rural mail carrier.

Rockford authorities continue their search for Mrs. Lillian Anderson of that city, who has not been seen since last Saturday, and Miss Hilma New, 17, who left home last Saturday.

A reward of $500 has been offered for information leading to the whereabouts of Mrs. Anderson.

SWITCHMEN, SHOP WORKERS TO VOTE ON STRIKE SOON

BALLOTS DISTRIBUTED TO 600,000 MEN IN DEPARTMENT.

IS COUNTER MOVE

Grievances Center on Contract System in Repair Work on Some Roads.

By Associated Press.

Chicago—Grievances centering about the contract system employed by some of the railroads in handling repair work has resulted in a vote for distribution of strike ballots to the 600,000 members of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor. This department comprises the six federated shop crafts and the switchmen's union of North America.

Authorization for the strike ballots was voted at the sixth biennial convention of the department which concluded its sessions Saturday. The vote to send out strike officers declared was a counter move to an effort to crush an organization completely.

"If there is a strike, and I feel sure there will, you will find it will be in protest of the action of railroads in ignoring decisions of the United States railway labor board," said R. M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employees' department.

Several complaints pending.

The labor board now has pending several complaints against the contract system. It is expected that a decision will be rendered soon after the conclusion of the present wage hearings.

"The carriers have arbitrarily reduced wages in defiance of the board," said Mr. Jewell. "They have reduced the piecework system and resorted to the farming out system which is a mere subterfuge by which they dodge labor board decisions."

A "showdown is predicted."

"But this time I am sure, the issue will come to a showdown. So far as we are concerned it is a fight for existence."

Mr. Jewell said the question was simple: Whether to strike or not to strike. He added the result of the vote should be known within 60 days.

"The carriers have been getting away with it," he said. "We are going to find out whether they can continue to do so. The board, it must be remembered, has no real power to enforce its decisions. It must rely upon the influence of public opinion."

PIANIST AT J. H. S. 9 YEARS AGO, NOW SHE'S ON STAGE

Close upon the sounding of the noon gong at high school there was a click, click of high heels and Carrie Seville, her Auburn hair piled up in a bun, took her place at the assembly room piano and striking up "Too Much Mustard" ushered out the 300 and some odd students. Nine years later, Carrie returned to the city in a comedy sketch at the Apollo theater this week-end.

Those who saw and recognized her at the afternoon performances Friday pronounced her unchanged except perhaps for the fitness attained after some undidled high heels and the calcium lights. Carrie still gives the chicken cluck with the same aptness which was the cry of all the grade kids. She talks, sings, a little and dances a lot, but little more affectionate than she played at the popular songs "by ear" in her high school days.

Meeting several of her old friends in the Apollo "green room" after the show, Carrie said she had never one whom she had ever known.

Now for the personal dope, her business partner, Mr. Deal is none other than her life partner, friend husband, leg, married for three years.

ARTIFICIAL LIMB MAKER CHARRED IN QUICK BLAZE

OLE BRONSON, CAUGHT IN HIS LITTLE SHOP BY FIRE.

LEGS BURN OFF

Victim Dies at Mercy Hospital Few Hours After Injuries.

Trapped in a blazing building in the rear of the Douglas hardware store early Friday night, Orrin B. ("Ole") Bronson, 60, manufacturer of artificial limbs here for the past 40 years, was so horribly burned, almost beyond recognition, that he died six and one-half hours later at Mercy hospital.

His entire body was a mass of charred flesh, and one of his pair of wooden legs, upon which he had made his way around Janesville, was destroyed by the fire. The other was pulled off by firemen in dragging him from the burning building.

Bronson remained conscious long enough to give his name to Dr. Gerald K. Woolf who attended him at the fire and later at the hospital where he was taken in the Whaley ambulance. He died at 1:30 a. m. Saturday.

Started from Store.

The fire was discovered about 7 p. m. in Bronson's shop, which also constituted his home, located in the building formerly occupied by the Dilzer nickel plating works. It is believed to have originated from a stove located near the legless man's bed.

How got such a start that he could not escape, the details of his tragic fight to get out, and the great pain which he must have suffered, will never be known. He was alone in the burning building, from South River street and facing on an alley.

It was not until the interior of Bronson's shop was a raging fire, that the fire was discovered. Passersby summoned the fire department and two streams of hose were poured into the burning building before it was under control.

The section of the structure occupied by Bronson was gutted, and several things were destroyed. The charred remains of the cripple's few articles of furniture—a bed, a few chairs—his work-bench and a few tools were all that remained before it was under control.

Mississippi Is Receding

By Associated Press.

St. Louis—Apparently ending its flood rampage, the Mississippi river Saturday was falling gradually from St. Louis to Cairo. It is leaving a wide, flat, waterlogged area of approximately 1,000 square miles of Alexander, Jackson and Union counties in southern Illinois, causing a loss of over $2,000,000 in crops and property, and making approximately 1,000 persons, mostly negroes, homeless.

Numerous row boats were to be seen on the streets of McClure, Ill. Saturday. The town was covered with three feet of water.

Flood sufferers are being cared for at refugee camps which have been established at Cairo and Fayetteville.

RADIO AERIAL

LIGHTNING SWITCH

BICYCLE RIMS OR BARREL HOOPS

CLEAT

PONY INSULATOR

By FRANK I. SOLAR
Instructor of Manual Training
Detroit High School

The first thing to be considered when installing a radio set is the aerial. While it is possible to use the bed springs, an eaves trough, or most any metal railing, an especially erected aerial is the most satisfactory.

It may be put up indoors and the wires stretched across the ceiling of the attic or any other room where it is convenient. Some aerials I have seen have been strung from the picture molding on one side of a room to the molding on the other side. Two coat hangers, one hung at each molding, make good "stretchers". If you wish to put an aerial up outdoors, however, bear in mind that the higher from the ground and the longer the antenna (the wires stretched between the masts) the more satisfactory the results. Excellent results may be obtained from an aerial 75 to 150 feet in length placed from 30 to 50 feet above the ground. The antenna should be allowed sag a little so it can blow in the breeze.

Mr. Frank I. Solar has prepared a series of articles on how to build a radio receiving outfit. This is the first. Clip out and save each article for reference. It takes the average boy with a set of tools that is by no means elaborate, no more than twenty-four hours to construct the receiving set described in this series. The construction is simple and clearly explained. Start making a set to-day.

For small sets used to receive from short distances most any kind of wire either insulated or bare will do for the antenna. I suggest that you use No. 14 copper wire, or bare aluminum wire. For guy wires use No. 10 or 12 telephone wire. The new requirement for amateurs shall not extend over 200 meter wave length. The four-wire aerial in figure 1, which is about 75 or 80 feet long, is about right for sending this wave length. The masts, which are fastened and lead to the peaks of the roof, may be any length. The stretchers should be about 9 feet long and the wires spaced an equal distance apart on the stretchers. At the base of the wires of the antenna may or may not be connected with each other. At the other end, N, from which the "lead in" is taken, each wire of the antenna should be connected to the one that leads inside to the instrument.

At figure 2 is shown a short-wire aerial which has its masts fastened to the front and back of the house. Figure 3 shows bicycle rims or barrel hoops used as stretchers. They may be used when it is not convenient to use long stretchers.

Figure 4 is an aerial stretched from the garage, or any other out-house to the house. Figure 5 shows the aerial wired to chimneys on an apartment building.

At A and B in figure 6 is shown how ordinary porcelain cleats or glass pony insulators are used where the antenna is connected to the spreaders.

The one-wire aerial insulated as shown in figure 7, and made as long as possible, is the easiest type to erect and it gives good results. The loose ends may be strung on strong screwdrivers between the house and the barn, a tree or post.

A lightning switch to serve as a protection in case of storms, may be purchased, but if it is large enough to be of any great account, it will rather be expensive. Directions for making one are given in my drawing. Use copper sheeting, 1/16 inch thick or thicker. A cement base is made. Pour the cement into a small wooden box when you make the base. While the cement is still soft, put pegs into it and then, when it has become quite firm, but not quite hard, pull them out, leaving holes through which screws may be

BILLBOARD PAYS FINE TRIBUTE TO "SCRATCH" HOGAN

Tribute to the memory of Frank M. Hogan, son of the late chief of police of Janesville, is paid in a notice in The Billboard, which has the following:

"Friends of Frank M. Hogan, ticket-seller with the Ringling-Barnum Circus, will regret to learn of his death at the Bellevue hospital, New York, April 1, of peritonitis. He had been identified with the 101 Ranch. Wild West, Buffalo Bill show and for the last three years with the big circus. 'Scratch' Hogan, as he was known and loved by thousands, goes into the next world with the wonderful record of being a man who never had an enemy. His presence always radiated cheer and happiness. He, if for nothing else than his sunny disposition, will be the most missed man around the Ringling-Barnum circus. He was a man who was always first in any mission or project of charity or kindness or in helping his fellowman. Prior to interment at Janesville, Wis., Hogan's remains were taken to a chapel on West 25th street, New York. Every detail in his funeral arrangements was perfect and his popularity was evidenced by the dozens of beautiful floral offerings that almost hid his casket.

Screen and Stage

Excellent motion pictures, vaudeville, a high school play and a stock company are on the bill at the various theaters in town for next week. Even the motion pictures show great variety, with westerns, extravaganzas, comedy and pictures of a highly dramatic type to be shown.

Among the stars to be seen are Mae Murray, William S. Hart, Agnes Ayres, Alice Lake, Buck Jones, and the ever-popular Harold Lloyd. "The Man on the Box" will be given by the Senior A class at the Myers theatre Thursday night. The Beach-Jones stock company will open an engagement there Sunday, April 30.

AT THE MYERS.
William S. Hart in "White Oak" will open the weekly bill at the Myers theatre. "White Oak" is a regular thriller story of the old west, of the type most liked by admirers of western stories. The hardships of the pioneers in the desert country, and the crude pleasures that were their lot, are shown in a series of scenes, and the climax of the picture is a fight in which Hart, in the part of Oak, kills the girl he loves and her father when the dreaded Indian circle was closing in on them.

This picture will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The high school play is one of the masterpieces for amateur production. It is a mystery story and has parts of rich humor. Miss Eunice Cunningham will have the leading feminine role. Frank Crowley the masculine role. Miss Eunice Nelson of the faculty, is in charge of the coaching.

Agnes Ayres stars for the first time in "The Lane That Had No Turning" at the Myers Friday and Saturday with the vaudeville bill. Her name is already familiar to moving picture fans, however, for she has appeared in such well-known pictures as "The Sign of the Cross" and "The Affairs of Anatol."

"The Lane That Had No Turning" is from the famous novel by Sir Gilbert Parker, who wrote "The Right of Way," "Behold My Fire," and "Wise Fool," besides other stories not yet dramatized. Miss Ayres plays the part of a girl in French Canada who marries and goes to France to become an opera singer. Much of the story is taken up with her struggles, and those of her husband, to find the will of her uncle, which had been stolen.

Miss Ayres' attractiveness and beauty are abetted by her numerous beautiful gowns while the settings, exterior and interior, are said to be excellent.

The Beach-Jones stock company, starting its engagement here Sunday, will play a number of popular repertoire plays. The company originated here a year and a half ago, playing its first engagement here. It has been popular wherever it appeared. Miss Eileen Stitzer is the leading lady.

AT THE APOLLO.
Harold Lloyd's newest, and, it is said, his most popular picture, "Never Weaken," will show at the Apollo. "Never Weaken" is a three-reel feature.

William S. Hart and Viola Vale in a scene from the Paramount Picture "White Oak" ture, and will be shown in conjunction with "Lavender and Old Lace," and an educational bill, "How to Grow Thin," making a triple bill.

"Never Weaken" is the same type of picture as "White Oak," a sea and boat picture, scenes in "Never Weaken" are mostly high in the air, with Lloyd doing some hair-raising stunts on beams and buildings in the course of construction. Many stunts a person to grip the arm of the chair, and that make audiences scream are shown, but are relieved by Lloyd's inimitable humor.

The main feature of "Lavender and Old Lace" is the fact that Marguerite Snow, a favorite in some of the first pictures ever produced—chiefly in the Million-Dollar Mystery—returns to the screen in it. It is taken from the famous story of the same name by Myrtle Reed, and, besides Miss Snow, features Louis Beaulieu and Sam Owen. The theme is the devotion of a woman to the man she loves, even though separated for years.

"How to Grow Thin," a one-reel feature, is not a comedy, but gives some real information. James Zulus, manager, has arranged to allow all women weighing more than 200 pounds, to this triple bill free of charge.

Packed houses for almost every performance enjoyed "The Three Musketeers," starring Douglas Fairbanks, shown the first four days of the week, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, in connection with the vaudeville bill. "The Invisible Bond," starring Irene Castle, Miss Castle was seen also in the picture "The Invisible Bond," which was well liked. In "The Invisible Bond" she displays more beautiful gown and dances in addition to her character portrayal.

AT THE BEVERLY.
The blue-ribbon at the Beverly theatre for the week will be "Peacock Alley," starring Mae Murray. This is the biggest picture that the manager has played since "The Queen of Sheba," and is being featured at large metropolitan theaters. It is a picture of Paris and New York; a picture reflecting resplendently the bewitching glamour of great cities, but also showing the pit-falls of this life.

The four main features of the pro-

This picture will be shown Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. On Sunday at this theater, Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift" will be shown. Miss Lake is a popular star here, this being her third production shown within a few weeks.

"The Golden Gift" of the title is the voice with which the heroine is endowed, and which she loses when her child is born. The plot is closely interwoven with the few characters, and re-united in the end.

Scenes are laid in Mexico, where Miss Lake plays the part of a dancer in a cafe, and in New York, where she is a singer in Grand Opera.

The feature for Friday and Saturday will be Buck Jones in "To a Finish." It is a western picture, interspersed as it should be for one of its type, with numerous first fights and duels. Helen Ferguson plays the leading feminine role.

ON SALE MONDAY.

"WHITE OAK"
A Paramount Picture
Never in recent years has a more masterful drama of the old west been presented to the public than "White Oak." William S. Hart's newest Paramount picture. It is virile, it is touching, the heart interest is intense, the desert scenes are like visions of the past to prove to us the trials and perils the pioneers had to contend with in their struggle to blaze the pathway for future civilization.
Mr. Hart is at his best in this photoplay, a picturesque, commanding figure every inch a man—sterling, true and honorable despite his calling—a gambler. And he proves that his name of Oak Miller, really stands for "White Oak," for he is white all the way through.

NEW TELEPHONE
NUMBERS ASSIGNEDNew Directory, With 5,000
Names, Distributed by Bell Company.

Elimination of the prefixes, "Rock" and "Bell," addition of suffixes, M. R. W. and J. denoting party lines of city subscribers and a revision of numbers both local and rural, are among the revolutionary changes which go into effect with the distribution Saturday of the new directory of the Wisconsin Telephone Company. The new book contains about 5,000 names.

The changes embodied in the new book mark a big step in the consolidation of the two companies.

The numbers of many places of business which have been the same under the Rock county system since its organization a quarter of a century ago, are abolished. Some keep their number under the re-organization because the number under the Bell and Rock systems were the same. Among these are the city water department, 15; Sheldon's Hardware store, 15; Badger drug company, 10; Southern Bell Telephone Co., 10; police department, 22; city department, 85; and Merchants & Savings bank, 105.

3,500 Added to Numbers

Numbers of all schools formerly under the Rock county system only are changed.

Rock county subscribers can figure out their numbers and the numbers of subscribers who are added by adding 3,500 to the former number. With those who have taken a party line under the re-organization, the number will have a suffix M. R. W. or J. Use of the prefix Bell and Rock is no longer necessary.

In place of the Morse code system used for the Rock county rural subscribers and the former system of the Bell Telephone Company, the new system in which letters, units and tens form different combinations. The Bell telephone numbers remain the same except when the party suffix is added.

New Rural System

The rural system of party lines is made through the following system: Letters M. R. W. and J. are used in addition to numbers. Units denote short rings and tens long rings. For instance, R-2 added to a rural subscriber's number would mean his call would be on party line R with three short rings. This is the standard system in use throughout the country. As the new switchboard in the Bell office is being completed, additional operators are being given positions at the board, coming from the Rock county office. Little delay will be experienced in getting the new system under the revised system as the Rock county switchboard has been arranged to meet this emergency, having both the old and new numbers made on the board.

Audible ringing will be put into effect. This is a new feature of the Bell system. Hereafter patrons have not heard the operator ringing the number which they called.

The Moose bazaar, which opened Wednesday night at Moose hall, and which will close Saturday night, was attended by a record-breaking crowd Friday night. WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

George Morton goes to work at the home of Planter, a rich man, when his father loses all his property—a heavy loss. George becomes a horse trainer and as a part of the job acts as groom to Sylvia Planter when she rides. He falls in love with her. Life is driven from the place and seeks an education, goes to Princeton, meets Dolly, who gets a place on the football team and aids his college to win from Harvard. Betty Allison is very kind to George, who at her home meets her friend, Sylvia, which is embarrassing. George gets a job with a brokerage office, makes a success, and a college secures a high social position. But Sylvia still flouts him, showing preference for a classmate who proves to be a scoundrel. Dollymple, George goes to war. On his return he enters into business, finds Dollymple is a crook, and Lambert are shocked to discover that Dollymple has been married to Sylvia one morning. That afternoon George finds Sylvia and in a moment of confusion he takes her in his arms to be discovered by Dollymple, who hands money as salary to his wounded pride. He is driven from the house and makes threats. Sylvia and George part and he returns to his old tutor, George Bailey, at Princeton.

"It's good of you to come, Mr. Morton," Mrs. Dollymple said. "Shall we go upstairs now?"

There was no bitterness in her voice, and she had taken Sylvia's hand, yet undoubtedly she knew everything. About the George's felt sorry for Dollymple than he had ever done.

"Please wait, Sylvia," he said. He followed Mrs. Dollymple upstairs and into the study room.

"Mr. Morton, dear,"

She beckoned to the nurse, and George remained in the room alone with the feverish man in the bed. He walked over and took the hot hand.

"Dollymple!" cried Dollymple's hoarse voice. "I believe you're sorry for me!"

"I am sorry," George said, quietly, "and you must get well."

Dollymple shook his head.

"I know all the dope, and I guess I'm off a few days, but I know you talk a little and sort of clean out or two things up. No silly deathbed repentance. I'm jealous of you, Morton; always have been, because you were getting things that I couldn't. I figured from the first you were an outsider."

The dry lips smiled a little.

"When you get like this it makes a lot of difference, doesn't it, how you come into the world? I'll be the real outsider in a few days—"

"Don't talk that way."

A quick temper disturbed Dollymple's face.

"They oughtn't to bring a man into the world as I was brought, without money."

George couldn't think of anything to say, but Dollymple hurried on:

"I wanted to thank you for the notes. Don't have to leave them to my family, anyway. And I'm not sure I don't better apologize all 'round. I don't forget I've had raw deal—lots of ways; but no point not saying Sylvia had pretty raw one from Dolly. Lucky escape for her—mean Dolly's not domestic animal, and all that now."

George was aware of a slight shiver as Dollymple's hoarse voice slipped into its old, not quite controlled mannerisms.

"Listen," Dollymple rambled on, "Dolly won't be any more. She's in 'n' sort of thing. Best thing, too. Sorry all 'round. That's all. Thanks coming, George."

And all George could say was:

"You have to go with Dolly."

But Dollymple turned, his head away. After a moment George proposed tentatively:

"Sylvia's downstairs. She wants very much to see you."

Dollymple shook his head.

"Catching."

"For her sake," George urged. Dollymple thought.

"All right," he said at last. "Long enough for me to tell her all that. But not near Nurse in the room. Catching and all that."

George clasped the hot hand.

"Thanks, Dolly. You've done a decent thing, and you're going to get well."

But as he left the room George felt that the physician had been right.

He spoke to the nurse, who sat in the upper hall, then he told Sylvia. She went up, and he waited for her. He felt that he had to wait. He hoped Mrs. Dollymple wouldn't appear again.

Sylvia wasn't long. She came down dry-eyed. She didn't speak even when George followed her to her automobile. She didn't speak when he kissed her; nor did he try to break a silence that he felt was curative. In the light and surrounded by a crowd they could clasp hands; in this obscure solitude there was nothing they could do or say. Only on the steps of her home she spoke.

"Good-night, George, and thank you."

"Good-night, dear Sylvia," he said, and returned to the automobile, and told the man to drive him to his apartment.

George couldn't think of anything to say, but Dollymple hurried on:

"I wanted to thank you for the notes. Don't have to leave them to my family, anyway. And I'm not sure I don't better apologize all 'round. I don't forget I've had raw deal—lots of ways; but no point not saying Sylvia had pretty raw one from Dolly. Lucky escape for her—mean Dolly's not domestic animal, and all that now."

George was aware of a slight shiver as Dollymple's hoarse voice slipped into its old, not quite controlled mannerisms.

"Listen," Dollymple rambled on, "Dolly won't be any more. She's in 'n' sort of thing. Best thing, too. Sorry all 'round. That's all. Thanks coming, George."

And all George could say was:

"You have to go with Dolly."

But Dollymple turned, his head away. After a moment George proposed tentatively:

"Sylvia's downstairs. She wants very much to see you."

Dollymple shook his head.

"Catching."

"For her sake," George urged. Dollymple thought.

"All right," he said at last. "Long enough for me to tell her all that. But not near Nurse in the room. Catching and all that."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a certain girl for two years off and on. During that time I have had three different girls. I did not realize how much I cared for the first girl mentioned until she told me the other day that she is going to move to a town some distance from here. Now I realize that I love her and I will be absolutely lost when I can't be with her any more.

If I had enough money I would ask her to marry me right away and not leave at all, but unfortunately I have been out of work for some time now and I am in no position to marry.

Do you think the girl would respect me if I told her I loved her and asked her to become engaged? I don't want to lose my chances. RUDOLPH.

It would be perfectly all right to tell the girl you love her and that you would ask her to marry you now if you were able. Ask her if she is willing to become engaged now.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been secretly engaged to a young man for almost a year. We have kept our engagement secret because his parents are opposed to his going with me and with any one seriously and he is afraid to say anything until he is ready to marry. So that people would not know we were engaged, he has gone with other girls occasionally and I have gone with other boys.

Lately I started going with another young man and I must confess that my liking for him has worried me. I have not felt that I cared as much for him as for the boy who sent me some roses he sent her.

Something has come over me to make me hate secrecy and to feel that I do not want to marry the boy I am engaged to. I really believe he loves me, but he is very selfish. If I break my engagement I know it will make him realize more than ever that he loves me and he will be broken hearted.

Do you think I ought to confess to him how disappointed I was about not receiving Easter flowers, or do you think I ought to break the engagement? The way I feel now I would like to be free on Sunday night so that the boy who sent the flowers could come to see me.

GERTRUDE.

Feeling as you do, I think you ought to break the engagement. It is only a half-way engagement anyway, since the boy is unwilling to have it known and since he goes with other girls and you go with other young men.

Probably when he loses you he will realize how much he cares for you, but the lesson ought to do him good. He will get only what he deserves.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What will remove warts?

BILLIE.

Nitric acid will remove warts in two or three applications. Buy a small quantity of the acid at the drug store and apply it to the warts by means of a toothpick, being careful not to get the acid on the flesh around the wart. After two or three days apply the acid again. In a short time the wart will dry and fall off.

"AT THE VILLA ROSE"—GREAT DETECTIVE STORY

By A. E. W. MASON.
Author of Many Well Known Stories of Wide Celebrity.

CHAPTER I.
Summer Lightning.
It was Mr. Ricardo's habit as soon as the second week of August came around to travel to Aix-les-Bains, in Savoy, where for five or six weeks he lived pleasantly. He pretended to take the waters in the morning, he went for a ride in his motor-car in the afternoon, he dined at the Cercle in the evening, and spent an hour or two after dinner in the baccarat rooms at the Villa des Fleurs. An enviable, smooth life without a doubt, and it is certain that his acquaintances envied him.

At the same time, however, they laughed at him and, alas! with some justice, for he was an exaggerated person. He was to be construed in the comparative. Everything in his life was a trifle, everything, from the fastidious arrangement of his neck-tie to the feminine nicety of his little dinner parties.

In age Mr. Ricardo was approaching the fifties, in condition he was a widower—a state greatly to his liking, for he avoided at once the irksomeness of marriage and the reproaches justly leveled at the bachelor. Finally, he was rich, having amassed a fortune in Mining Lanes, which he had invested in profitable securities.

Ten years of ease, however, had not altogether obliterated in him the business look. Though he lounged from January to December, he lounged with the air of a financier taking a holiday; and when he visited, as he frequently did, the studio of a painter, a stranger would have hesitated to decide whether he had been drawn, thither by a love of art or by the possibility of an investment.

His "acquaintances" have been mentioned, and the word is suitable. For while he mingled in many circles, he stood aloof from all. He affected the company of artists, by whom he was regarded as one ambitious to become a connoisseur, and among the younger business men, who had never dealt with him, he earned the disrespect reserved for the dilettante.

His Little Failing.
If he had a brief it was that he had discovered no great man who in return for practical favors would engrave his memory in brass. He was a Meeana without a Horos, an Earl of Southampton without a Shakespeare. In a word, Aix-les-Bains in the season was the very place for him, and never for a moment did it occur to him that he was here to be dipped in agitations and hurried from excitement to excitement.

The beauty of the little town, the crowd of well-dressed and agreeable people, the rose-colored life of the place, all made their appeal to him. But it was the Villa des Fleurs which brought him to Aix. Not that he played for anything more than an occasional louis; nor, on the other hand, was he merely a cold looker-on. He had a banknote or two in his pocket on most evenings at the service of the victims of the tables. But the pleasure to his curious and dilettante mind lay in the spectacle of the battle which was waged night after night between raw nature and good manners. It was extraordinary to him how constantly manners prevailed. There were, however, exceptions.

For instance, on the first evening of this particular visit he found the rooms hot and smothered into the little semi-circular garden at the back. He sat there for half an hour under a flawless sky of stars watching the people come and go in the light of the electric lamps, and appreciating the rows and jewels of the women with the eye of a connoisseur; and then into this starry quiet there came suddenly a flash of vivid life.

A girl in a soft, clinging frock of white satin darted swiftly from the rooms and flung herself nervously upon a bench. She could not, to Ricardo's thinking, be more than twenty years of age. She was certainly young.

The suppleness of her figure proved it, and he had moreover caught a glimpse, as she rushed out of a fresh and very pretty face; but he had lost sight of it now. For the girl wore a big black satin hat with a broad rim, from which a couple of white ostrich feathers curved over at the back, and in the shadow of that hat her face was masked. All that he could see was a pair of long diamond earrings, which sparkled and trembled as she moved her head—and that she did constantly. Now she stared moodily at the ground, now she flung herself back then she twisted nervously to the right, and then a moment afterwards to the left; and then again she stared in front of her, swinging a satin slipper backward and forward against the pavement with the petulance of a child.

All her movements were spasmodic; she was on the verge of hysteria. Ricardo was expecting her to burst into tears, when she sprang up and as swiftly as she had come she hurried back into the rooms. "Summer lightning," thought Mr. Ricardo.

Near to him a woman sneered, and a man said, pityingly: "She was pretty, that little one. It is regrettable that she has lost."

In a leisurely way Mr. Ricardo finished his cigar and stroked back into the rooms, making his way to the big table just on the right hand of the entrance, where the play as a rule runs high. It was clearly running high to-night. For so deep a crowd thronged about the table that Ricardo could only by standing on tiptoe see the faces of the players.

Very High Play.
Of the banker he could not catch a glimpse. But though the crowd changed, its units were constantly changing, and it was not long before Ricardo found himself standing in the front rank of the spectators, just behind the players seated in this chair. The oval green table was spread out beneath him littered with bank notes. Ricardo turned his eyes to the left, and saw seated at the middle of the table the man who was holding the bank. Ricardo recognized him with a start of surprise. He was a young Englishman, Harry Wethermill, who, after a brilliant career at Oxford and at Munich, had turned his scientific genius to banking. He had a strong belief that somewhere, some while ago, he had almost seen her. And this belief grew and haunted him. He was still vaguely puzzling his brains to find the place when the croupier finished his reckoning. Ricardo saw two thousand louis in the dealer's hand. "Who will take on the bank, for two thousand louis?"

No one, however, was willing. A fresh bank was put up for sale, and Wethermill, still sitting in the dealer's chair, bought it. He spoke at once to an attendant, and the man slipped round the table, and forcing his way through the crowd, carried a message to the girl in the black hat. She looked toward Wethermill and smiled, and the smile made her face a miracle of tenderness.

Then she disappeared, and in a few moments Ricardo saw way open in the throng behind the banker, and she appeared again only a yard or two away, just behind Wethermill. He turned, and taking her hand into his, shook it challengingly. "I couldn't let you play against me, Celia," he said, in English; "my luck's too good to-night. So you shall be my partner instead."

Almost opposite to him a small, white-gloved hand holding a five-louis note was thrust forward between the shoulders of two men seated at the table. Wethermill leaned forward and shook his head with a smile. With a gesture he refused the stake. But he was too late. The fingers of the hand had opened, the note fluttered down on to the cloth, the money was staked, and the croupier leaned back in his chair.

"It's a one suite," he said quietly. He relinquished the bank rather than play against that five-louis note. The stakes were taken up by their owners. The croupier began to count

Wethermill's winnings, and Ricardo, curious to know whose small, delicately gloved hand it was which had brought the game to so abrupt a determination, leaned forward. He recognized the young girl in the white satin dress and the big black hat whose nerve had got the better of her a few minutes since in the garden.

He saw her now clearly, and thought her of an entrancing loveliness. She was moderately tall, fair or skin, with a fresh coloring upon her cheeks which she owed to nothing but her youth. Her hair was of a light brown with a short wave, dark and wonderfully clear. But there was something more than her beauty to attract him.

He recognized the young girl in the white satin dress and the big black hat whose nerve had got the better of her a few minutes since in the garden.

She would look a little more picturesque than most girls of her age, and she was certainly a good deal more soignée than many, and she had the French woman's knack of putting on her clothes. But those would be all the differences, leaving out the frankness. Ricardo wondered in the street of Bohemia she dwelt. He wondered still more when he saw her again half an hour afterwards at the entrance to the Villa des Fleurs. She came down the long hall with Harry Wethermill at her side.

The couple were walking slowly, and talking as they walked with so complete an absorption in each other that they were unaware of their surroundings. At the bottom of the steps a stout woman of fifty-five over-jewelled, and over-dressed and flooded with paint, watched their approach with a smile of good-humored amusement. When they came near enough to hear she said in French:

"Well, Celia, are you ready to go home?"

The girl looked up with a start.

"Of course, madame," she said, with a certain submissiveness which surprised Ricardo. "I hope I have not kept you waiting."

She ran to the cloakroom, and came back again with her cloak. "Goodbye, Harry," she said, dwelling upon his name and looking out upon him with soft and smiling eyes. "I shall see you to-morrow evening," he said, holding her hand. Again she let it stay within his keeping, but she frowned, and a sudden gravity settled like a cloud upon her face. She turned to the elder woman with a sort of appeal.

"No, I don't think we shall be here to-morrow, shall we, madame?" she said reluctantly.

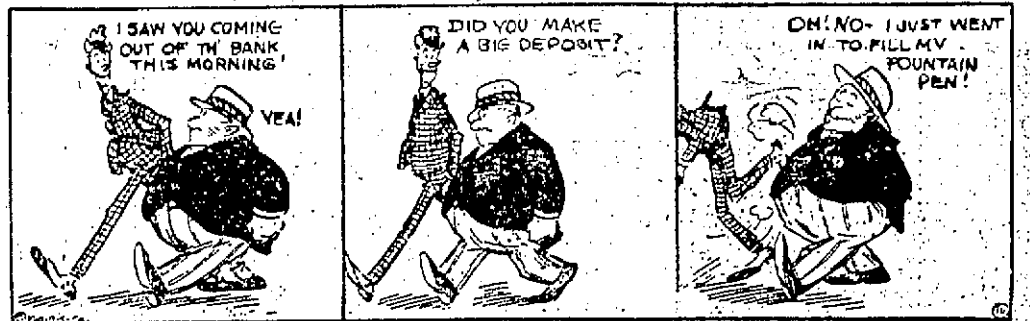

"Of course not," said madame briskly. "You have not forgotten what we planned? No, we shall not be here to-morrow, but the night after—yes."

Celia turned back again to Wethermill.

Church Basketball Teams Start Final Games Saturday

RACE FOR FIRST IS CLOSE WITH EDGE TO MARY'S

GAMES SATURDAY.
Methodists vs. Congregational.
Trinity vs. Baptists.

Four teams play their final games in the church basketball league at 8 p. m. Saturday night. For this reason, exceptionally close battles are sure to take place.

May Bust Tie.
The Methodists, meeting the Congregationalists, will make every effort to break away from the tie for second with St. Patrick's. A win will do that for them. On the other hand, the Saints have another game to play and will have a chance to tie the standing again should the M. Es. cop.

As the league stands now, St. Mary's are in first position. The worst they can do is to go into a game while either the Methodists or St. Patrick's win. A win for St. Mary's from St. Peter's next Saturday night will give them a clear tie.

Trinity May Spurt.
The Baptists are down to clash with Trinity Saturday. This is an opportunity for Trinity to get out of the tie for seventh although Trinity may still have a final spurt remaining.

Busy Man's Sport Page

BY FRANK SINGHAHL
Sports have taken on a healthy growth in Wisconsin during the past two years. This is largely due to the fact that newspapers have been devoting increased space to athletics. Just at the present, the amateur is being placed in the core. This is only natural for in the smaller communities, it is the amateur who provides the backbone of sporting activities.

A good field for Commissioner Landis to work on through organized baseball would be to give every most encouragement to baseball, not only in the large cities but in rural towns. After all, many of the stars of the big leagues have found their way to the higher firmament from the rough diamonds of country districts.

It is to be regretted that the University of Wisconsin is considering abandoning plans to enter the intercollegiate regatta at Foshinghouse this year. The races on the Hudson rank with the Army-Navy game and the world series as the great Eastern sporting events of the year. The Badgers would gain much credit by taking part in the event no matter where they placed in the results.

To crow when you win and to hide when you lose does not meet the true requirements of sportsmanship. Again the Gazette calls attention to this fact. The story of a defeat is just as much news as that of a victory. The public wants to know.

Racine is going to make sure that tennis becomes of greater growth and longevity. The net club of that city has a program that calls for teaching the game to the young. It will further endeavor to procure stars of national reputation for exhibition purposes. The Janesville Tennis club might well take notice of these steps.

The Beloit Fabrics are working up considerable interest in baseball by having members of the team appear before groups of boys to explain how to play the national game. This will show its results in an attendance. It is time well spent.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Vosburg, of Fort, Named Washburn College Coach

(By Gazette Correspondent.)
Fort Atkinson.—Glenn Vosburg, this city, has been appointed athletic coach at Washburn college, Topeka, Kan. He will leave with his family for the Kansas capital Sept. 1.

Coach Vosburg will pay particular attention to football, basketball and baseball. He has a student body of 2,000 from which to draw.

Vosburg coached gridiron teams in the Fort High school a number of years ago. During his regime, Fort was usually partner to a three-cornered battle for the state championship with Milwaukee and Fox River valley schools the other contenders, although the season generally closed without a decision.

While Vosburg was in charge of athletics here, the local high school sent many star athletes to Lawrence and Carroll colleges and some to the University of Wisconsin. The record made in those days is one of which Fort Atkinson shall always be proud.

Vosburg was, for many years, leader of the Methodist church choir here.

Yost May Quit Gopher Eleven

The team is composed of J. A. Steiner, George Basford, Fred Wright, Eber Arthur, Phil Korst and Leon Battig.

Play will start at 1 p. m. and continue until 10 p. m. Teams from Milwaukee, Madison, Appleton, Racine, Eau Claire and Fond du Lac reached Madison Saturday morning.

Condoms to Play Evansville Team

Evansville has not cancelled its game with the Condons Transfers to be played at the Cut-Off city Sunday. This information was given out Friday after a long distance telephone conversation by Manager Johnson of the "Lower city" squad.

The Condons practiced at the Samson diamond Friday night. Their lineup Sunday will be Marks, 1b; Neubauer, 2b; Bach, ss; Pemberton or Thomas, 3b; Nelson, p; Utzick, c; B. with 26 counts. Jefferson came in fourth; Monticello, sixth; Lake Geneva, seventh; Cambridge, tenth; and Lancaster, last, of the schools near here.

A crew race between the Badgers and Manitowish, one between the junior varsity and St. John's Military academy, and Venetian night will feature the entertainment for the visitors that day. The fourth annual interscholastic tennis meet will be conducted May 26 and 27.

WHITEWATER MIXES DATES; NET PLAY OFF

Soft Water in the Kitchen.

EVERY woman knows what it means to have Running Soft Water in her kitchen—she would not be without Soft Water if she could get it—easily, whenever wanted.

With Soft Water kitchen work is simply cut in half—and only pure soap is needed. Washing powders and chemicals, that are so injurious to the hands, are dispensed with.

China and glassware sparkle with bright cleanliness—no film dulls their appearance or gives that cloudy look caused by hard water.

Another thing—with soft water no greasy, shiny soap curd forms to clog drains and cause plumbing bills. Soft water changes soap to a rich creamy suds—hard water changes it to a sticky dirty curd.

The Totem of Black Hawk

By EVERETT McNEIL

The morning had dawned clear and bright and clean after Dumo Nature's vigorous washing of the night before; and when Brighteyes saw that daylight had come and the storm had ceased, she insisted that she must now be on her way to her people. But Mrs. Clay smiled and shook her head. She pointed to the bandaged and swollen ankle and tried to make Brighteyes understand that it would be impossible for her to walk and carry her baby and that both of them were most welcome to stay until she could use her foot in comfort and in safety. Brighteyes, however, declared that her foot was not hurt much, and that she could walk all right "with stick," and, to prove it, she rose from the bed and, placing both feet upon the floor, attempted to stand. But the instant she pressed the weight of her body on the hurt ankle the pain was so great that even her stoical Indian blood could not prevent a sharp cry of agony.

"There, now, what did I tell you?" and Mrs. Clay hurried to her side. "No use trying to walk. Just lie down and keep quiet for a few days," and she helped her back on the bed. "And you will be all right. But," shaking her head emphatically, "no use trying to walk on that foot until it is fit to walk on, or you'll be laid up for months."

Brighteyes unresistingly allowed herself to be helped and said no more about going to the great delight of Ruth, who had been completely charmed by the brown little Indian baby and his mother. The storm of the night before had left the ground so wet that Big Tom was obliged to postpone the plowing he had hoped to start that morning until the next day.

"Well, it's an ill wind that blows nobody good," he laughed, when he came into the house after having taken stock of the doings of the storm. "The ground is too wet for plowing, and so I'll make you those brush brooms that you're wanting," and he smiled down into Mrs. Clay's face. "Gid and Si have taken their rifles and have gone on a hunt for deer meat, so, I reckon, you can calculate on having venison to cook for dinner. How's the foot?" He turned abruptly to the Indian girl, who lay on the bed, with the two babies kicking and crowing by her side and Ruth seated near.

"Keep hurt," Brighteyes glanced up a bit shyly at the big, dark-skinned man. "No can walk. White squaw make lie on bed. No let go." "Well, I should say not, not with that foot and that little yunk!" Big Tom declared, heartily. "You are welcome to our grub and roof just as long as you can stand while folks ways of living. They sure are cute," and he grinned down at the two babies. "Want to sell him?" and he pointed one big finger at the brown little Indian baby. "Ecap fine boy. Give cow for him."

"No-no! No sell; not for cow; not for gold. He my be-be!" and the Indian woman's eyes flamed with outraged motherhood.

"Well, no harm done," laughed Big Tom. "I reckon babies, red and yellow and white, are all the same to their mothers. Dad wouldn't sell you for the biggest cow that ever walked, with a wagonload of gold thrown in, would he, Miss Skozziks?" and he chuckled his own baby under the chin.

"No no like ask sell be-be," Brighteyes declared, solemnly, still

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD IN PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.
Big Tom Clay and his family, Mrs. Clay, Gideon, the 12-year-old son, Ruth, the little daughter, and the baby, come from the east and settle in the Rock river valley in northern Illinois. They build a cabin home, plow ground and encounter many adventures. Gideon proves his worth by lighting a wild cat. Silas Wegg, an old trapper and hunter with a most powerful appetite, comes to the Clay home and helps with all the work about the place, going away from time to time. On one return he informs Tom that the Indians are preparing for an uprising. Mrs. Clay refuses to leave. During a terrible storm a young Indian mother, carrying her precious baby, is rescued by the Clays. She has sprained her ankle. Her baby is given care and she is nursed to health. Ruth takes such care of the baby that the mother, who proves to be Bright Eyes, a daughter of Black Hawk, rewards her.

regarding Big Tom dubiously. "Don't blame you," grinned Big Tom. "He's a mighty promising chunk of Indian devilment."

"For a moment, the bright black eyes regarded him questioningly, as if doubtful whether or not the words should be considered complimentary; then, apparently satisfied, the solemn face lighted with smiles. "Some day, when grow big, he make great warrior, like my father," she said one hour proudly, on the dusky forehead of her baby. "Make all his enemies tremble."

"Hope he never gives this little one cause to tremble," and the big man bent tenderly over his baby.

"No, no," the face of Brighteyes shone with gratitude. "He no make friends tremble. Be like strong oak to them—protect."

"My father's totem," she said proudly. "Keep all time on neck."

"Bully for him," laughed Big Tom. "Well, just make yourself to home. You sure are welcome. Now I must be getting after that brush for those brooms." Taking his rifle from its pegs and picking up a small ax, Big Tom hurried off toward the woods to cut the brush for the brooms.

In a couple of hours he was back, with a bundle of straight willow shoots, each a little larger around than a lead pencil and some three feet long.

The construction of the brooms was a very simple task. First he smoothed off a handle out of a straight piece of wood, about four feet long and as large around as a girl's wrist. Then he took a sufficient number of the willow shoots to make a broom-sized bundle, carefully arranged them so that their small ends were even, and the other ends, by cutting, inserted one end of the prepared handle in their center, and tightly bound them to it with strong thongs of deerhide. The result was a broom capable of doing effective work, when wielded by a strong-armed pioneer woman, especially on dirt floors.

Big Tom, seated on a chair a few feet in front of the house, was working on his third broom when he heard a distant halloo.

"Sounds like Gid," he thought, looking up from his work.

Half a mile away, coming down the side of a little hill toward him, he saw a couple of horsemen, followed closely by two men on foot. It needed but a glance to tell Big Tom that the two horsemen were Indians; but, at first, he could not tell who or what the two footmen were; so closely did they keep behind the horse. Then the shorter of the two ran and raced behind the horse and waved his cap and yelled; and he recognized Gideon. "Company!" he called cheerfully to Mrs. Clay, who was at work in the house.

"For the land sakes, who can it be?" and Mrs. Clay, followed by Ruth, hurried out of the house. "Indians!" she exclaimed, the moment she saw the two horsemen.

"There's Gid!" cried Ruth, excitedly.

"And Si!" ejaculated Mrs. Clay, as the old hunter stepped out from behind one of the advancing horses where he could be seen.

"And they've got the deer meat," declared Big Tom, with satisfaction. "See that buck on the horse, back of one of the Indians?"

When the little company were within a few rods of the house, Old Tom again broke into a run and raced up to where his father and mother and Ruth were standing.

"It's Great Thunder and Storm Cloud," he panted, the moment he reached home. "Si knows them. They've come for Brighteyes. Great Thunder is her husband. They were looking for her when they heard our shouts and hurried up to see if we knew anything about her. Oh, Dad, I killed the finest buck you ever saw! Great Thunder has him on the horse back of him."

"Shot him on the run, tow, by Jinks! As pretty a shot as I ever seed fired. You're sharp born for a hunter," and Silas, who at that moment came up with the Indians, slapped the excited boy approvingly on the back.

The two Indians at once jumped from their horses.

"Where square and panoses?" Great Thunder queried, as soon as the brief greetings were over, his eyes turning anxiously toward the blankets that inclosed the open side of the half-faced camp. "Big Tom" pointed to the blankets. "Walk right in. She's busted her ankle and can't walk," and going to the blankets, he pulled one aside and motioned Great Thunder to enter.

There was a little joyous cry from Brighteyes, followed by a rapid interchange of Indian words, as Great Thunder entered. After some ten minutes he came out, gravely thanked

Mr. and Mrs. Clay, as best he could with his broken English, for the shelter and the care they had given his wife and baby, and informed them that now he would take his family home with him, since Brighteyes could ride on his horse without hurt to her ankle.

"But not until after dinner," protested Mrs. Clay, hospitably. "You must stay and have some of that fine buck you brought in on the back of your horse. I'll have the dinner ready in a jiffy. Get a hot fire going," and she turned to Big Tom. The two Indians, with grunts of satisfaction, accepted Mrs. Clay's invitation; and, when the dinner was ready, did ample justice to the squaw's cooking, pronouncing it especially the venison, "heep good!" (Continued Next Week.)

SELLING BY POOLS IS GENERAL PLAN

Tobacco Growers Uniting in All States for Better Marketing.

Cooperative marketing of tobacco through the uniting of growers into associations under a five year contract has been in an amazing manner in the last year. In the south and east where the movement was started, cooperative marketing not only takes in the Burley district but practically every other tobacco growing section. In Connecticut about 2,000 growers have endorsed the plan and it must be remembered that the state is small and one limited section of the state is devoted to growing the leaf.

Now comes Wisconsin with a proposal to join at least 75 per cent of the growers into an association for the purpose of selling the Badger crop on its merits.

The specific things that organization can accomplish for the growers are:

- 1—Sale of tobacco on a quality or grade basis, fair both to producer and buyer.
- 2—Stabilize prices by feeding the market as the demand arises.
- 3—Have complete information concerning the stocks of tobacco in the United States and sell on a fair basis.
- 4—Increase demand for export.

Obtain efficiency in selling through central agencies which the individual grower is unable to secure by himself.

The move to market tobacco through association is a result of the advice of the board of health and its officers, the Chamber of Commerce and all other civic organizations are back of it.

With favorable weather, there is no reason why Janesville cannot step out in brightest garb by the end of next week.

Street Commissioner Thomas B. McKune, announced Saturday that he is prepared to cover the entire city with teams every day from Monday to and including Thursday. Those desiring to have rubbish hauled away free may place it near the curb in front of their homes and it will be picked up by the city teams.

"We will haul all kinds of rubbish but ashes," said Mr. McKune. "I will arrange to have every street in the city covered each day. I guarantee to clean up the entire job in four days. If I see it can't be done with three teams, we can put on five or six."

It looks as though Mr. Worthington in the fulfillment of his duty may have trod on the toes of some of Mr. Whipple's moonshine friends.

We ask the county board to call a special meeting so that the results of the proposed investigation of the sheriff's office may be made public before the next election. Then, fellow-citizens, you might all have a chance to turn this "raw deal" into a "square deal" and show Mr. Worthington that you appreciate a conscientious, law enforcing officer by making him the next sheriff!

Personally, we have no use to mind but we do wish to see justice done.

Series of Holstein Sales in S. Section

With the Rock county quality Holstein sale being held on the Janesville fair grounds May 2, southern Wisconsin Holstein breeders expect hundreds of buyers for the series of sales at which 600 prize black and whites will be offered.

There will be 150 blooded Holsteins at the Waukesha county sale on April 26 and 27. At the Rock county sale, the first of the county associations, 65 head of quality animals will be offered including 50 females and 15 bulls, selected from 25 of the best herds. On May 3 Green county through their association will sell 30 head at Monroe. On May 4 and 5 the Lake Mills breeders will sell 150 head and on May 6 the Sauk county breeders will sell at Reedsburg.

The bulk of the Rock county cattle to be offered are of the Omsby and Homestead strain of breeding and 11 of the cows have A. R. O. records. The sales are declared to be "Holstein opportunity" because of the high quality stock being offered.

Better Association Work in Rock County

Success of county breed association depends upon activity.

The vigorous and best markets for better stock raised in Rock county is within and near Rock county. Good strides have been made in improved stock, but breed associations are urged not to lay down on the job having elected a county association. Livestock is the most important industry in Rock county and sales reflect directly on every farm in every village and city. Better sales means a better county.

It is hoped that the new Poland-China association will further join to push the black swine produce.

The Poland-China breeders are waiting in the effort to form Rock county show herds for the county fairs and then for the state fair. The Duroc breeders will have a herd and there are sufficient Poland-China and Chester-White swine of quality to form a herd for the state fair. There is no better publicity work.

Warn Farmers on Buying Soil Vaccine

Farmers in Wisconsin were warned against purchasing a product known as "soil vaccine" by C. E. Norgard, commissioner of agriculture, in a statement today.

Because of certain bacteria said to be contained in the so-called "vaccine," the manufacturer is said to claim, marvelous increases in crop production from use of the substance. Mr. Norgard declares, however, that investigations made in Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio and Canada, do not support these claims.

Before a product of this character is sold in Wisconsin, it is pointed out.

The Most Essential Food

MILK

This is the land flowing with milk and honey!

Is She Worth Saving?

Men are finding out about food. One day we are told it is the "calories" that count. The next we learn that while "calories" are just as important as they were, there is another factor more essential—"VITAMINES."

Through all books and discussions of food and food values runs the one statement on which all people agree. DRINK MILK.

Milk is a complete food in itself. It contains all known varieties of vitamins.

Milk and milk products produced in Rock county are YOUR BEST FOOD. Use more of them.

The Rock county dairyman pausing to look back over a life time of long days of work producing milk and effort in building up a clean herd, realizes that all pay cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

The farmer realizes that he has supplied the food for the children of the nation. Your children deserve the best chance for good health. Good milk means that better health, for you and your children.

Use More Milk and Milk Products—and Not Substitutes

Use of more dairy products will help Make Rock County First! The Rock County Farm Bureau, George Hull, President, Hugh C. Heromgway, secretary, Court House, Janesville, Wis.

BRYAN COMMENTS ON SCRIBNER TALK

Regrets Attitude of Local Pastor on Bible as Religious Book Only.

Questioned in Milwaukee concerning the recent statement of the Rev. Charles J. Scribner, pastor of the Congregational church here, that he regarded the Bible as a religious book that made no pretense of being based on scientific facts, William Jennings Bryan is reported to have said:

"I cannot enter into a newspaper discussion of these matters. I am not in the mind of any man, no matter how great or small. I regret that a man of the pulpit who pretends to be spreading the gospel of Christ should permit himself to be swayed by the biased scientific knowledge that is not founded on one iota of the truth and fact that marks the birth and resurrection of the Christ or the other teachings of the Bible."

Mr. Bryan will speak from the same platform in Janesville Monday night from which the Rev. Mr. Scribner disputed Mr. Bryan's attack upon evolution. He will undoubtedly make this an opportunity to reply to the local pastor.

authority will be given theoretically in anticipation of receipts from import duties. In other words to meet expenses of the government the treasury will borrow from the public to the amount of $205,000,000 and presumably pay it back from tariff receipts.

Britain to Pay Interest
But that will not be necessary because by July 1 the United States government will receive $200,000,000 from Great Britain as interest on the war debt. This sum will be used to retire the treasury certificates. President Harding would not permit the treasury certificates to be issued against receipts of interest from foreign bonds until the money is actually in the government's possession. So the leaders are tacking the measure on the tariff bill. The best course would have been to wait until July 1st and then issue treasury certificates but administrative leaders are embarrassed by the action of the Republican conference of this week which has ordered the Senate Finance committee to report out a bonus bill within a reasonable time. And this now is interpreted as meaning two or three weeks. Rather than accept the House bill which would be futile and mean a presidential veto, the Senate leaders feel that the Senate Finance committee will meet the wishes of the House ways and means committee as well as President Harding and would save much legislative time.

Anticipating Tariff Receipts
To issue the treasury certificates on the expectation that tariff receipts will provide enough money to retire them is necessarily doubtful but the Republican leaders do not for a moment expect revenues from import duties to pay the balance of the conference of the British interest. Treasury officials confirm the information that the British will pay the interest on the first of July. This gives $200,000,000 which Mr. Mellon had said would be counted in before making his statement of a $484,000,000 deficit. So if $105,000,000 is used for soldier bonus purposes the total deficit for the fiscal year 1923 will be $379,000,000.

As to this deficit, Congress does not have to face it before the December session of Congress this year. That means the Congressional elections will be out of the way.

One thing can be written down as certain. There will be no further tax legislation this summer. Republican leaders have agreed upon that.

No More Tax Legislation
Not only would it be politically unwise to add taxes before the elections when already there is so much dissatisfaction because Congress didn't materially reduce the taxes in the present session but Republican leaders are convinced that President Harding's suggestion of a new method of taxation ought to be worked out. Mr. Harding has been won over to the sales tax. The main objection hitherto has been that it is a political effect might be disastrous as the country would hardly have time enough to adjust itself to the new tax when the elections would intervene. But in the December session of Congress, the Republicans feel they will have a free hand and will be able before the 1924 election to correct any defects in the sales tax plan.

To Pay the Bonus
In brief, therefore, the administration is getting ready to pay the holders their bonus, to forget about the half billion dollar deficit until next December when the elections are out of the way, and to consider seriously a sales tax a substitute for all present taxes. In addition to this, it is now practically certain that when the British government turns over its four billions of war bonds to the United States government, the treasury here will endeavor to recall

AND HERE'S HOW YOU MAKE IT

The Golf Game is a fascinating amusement, and it is especially so when you have made the toy yourself and with your own tools.

The wooden parts of the toy should be of some soft material. A plane, a hand saw and coping saw are the tools needed for the wood-working. A pair of tin snips will be needed to cut out the back-stop, for it is of tin.

The diagram in the upper left hand corner of the picture shows clearly how the base is cut out. Nine golf holes are made in it in the positions shown. Bore them with a countersink and make them deep enough to catch and hold the marble ball. The narrow wooden guards that are fastened to the base should be made of small pieces of pliable stock or bent to shape and laced securely in place.

The figure of the man is laid out on a piece of wood one surface of which has been divided into quarters in squares with a pencil. Lay out the figure so that it covers the same number of squares on the wood as it does in the diagram. The man and the base he stands upon are sawed in any piece. Fasten the base to the bottom of the toy with screws.

The arms of the man must be sawed separately and fastened to the body with roundhead screws. The arm that holds the golf stick and the golf stick itself should be sawed in one piece. The cross-bar to which the rubber band is fastened is joined with a halfpin joint to the golf-stick arm.

Before assembling the toy paint the parts. The base should be painted green, the holes yellow and the tin back-stop bright red. The man's cap and shoes should be made black, his shirt red and his trousers blue or brown.

Now the parts have been painted assemble them. To operate the toy take hold of the stick fastened to the golf-stick arm. Pull it back. This stretches the rubber band. Place a marble in a shallow depression that should be made in the little trench at the man's feet. Let go of the stick. The golf stick flies forward, strikes the marble and drives it out on the "green." It will roll back and, if you are lucky, into one of the holes.

Each person makes three shots at a turn. The holes in the green are numbered and the numbers of the holes the ball drops into are added together. The first player to reach a total of fifty, or above it, wins the game.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor Gazette:
The "Special Correspondence" in the Gazette of April 19th concerning the resignation of Mr. Waddell from the Evansville schools, inspires more correspondence in an attempt to fairly place before your readers, more facts in the case. This is the viewpoint of a taxpayer and citizen who has no relations with the superintendent or the board.

First, the real reason, of course, for the resignation of Mr. Waddell is his opportunity to be the head of the schools in a much larger city, at a larger salary, in every way a much more attractive position.

Second, Mr. Waddell has had, in the past, several offers from larger cities at larger salaries, which the Evansville board has not in order to retain Mr. Waddell's services.

Third, fourteen years in the same school is evidence in itself of harmonious relations between the principal and the board.

Fourth, the "controversy" and ill-feeling" spoken of has been mostly on the part of outside-citizens of the community, and not primarily on the part of the board or Mr. Waddell.

Fifth, and an important point which your dispatch failed to mention: Mr. Waddell will leave the superintendency with the hearty good wishes and feeling of I believe, a majority of those who follow school matters closely and have the welfare of the schools really at heart.

A CITIZEN OF EVANSVILLE.

Editor Gazette:
We have been interested in watching the Worthington-Whipple controversy and it is with much indignation that we see that Mr. Whipple has won out—so far.

We are so located on the J.-Bolt concrete highway that we have had a splendid opportunity to see a good deal of the efficient, fearless, conscientious manner in which Mr. Worthington has carried on his duties as speed patrolman. Nearly everyone will agree with us when we say that a larger share of the speeding is done by consumers of moonshine and by boot-leggers. Consequently, it seems as though an officer with gumption enough to ferret out and arrest moonshiners and boot-leggers should be fully supported by the community and by those higher in office. We know positively that Mr. Worthington has been on the job until midnight these bonds to the American public and this got back into the treasury a big slice of the war debt itself and side the American government over its next few years of financial stress. Senators say a British bond with an American endorsement will sell as quickly as any bond on the market today.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

Markets and Money as Seen from New York

(By Associated Press.)

New York—Continuation of the boom in the stock market this week carried the average price of rails and high grade steels, equipments, motors and other major securities on daily gains ranging from 1,300,000 to about 2,000,000 shares.

Increased public participation was balanced at intervals by heavy selling for profits, but sections were moderate, save in several of the less representative industrials and specialties.

Practically the same conditions ruled in the bond list, issues offering slightly, as did also some of the European war offerings. On the other hand underlying domestic rails and utilities were decidedly strong.

The coal strike seemed to enter only casually into the calculations of traders, although advices from industrial centers reported curtailment of operations due to scarcity of fuel and further setting down of non-union mines.

Bankers reported an expansion of the demand for bonds. This found its chief outlet in the subscription to new underwriting, foreign and domestic, amounting in the aggregate to about $150,000,000.

INVESTMENTS

Steel prices have been advancing throughout the week and the demand is generally good. This is a comforting barometer of business conditions and indicative also that railroads are spending some money in new work.

New England Oil Co., sold 1,000,000 of 1st mortgage bonds at 3 per cent. this week.

American Writing paper said to be operating at better than 50 per cent. capacity.

From advance information of the Central Leather and American Fide and leather companies it would seem that this industry is in an unsatisfactory condition. A loss of profits of $200,000 is shown by the A. H. & L. Co.

The Otis Elevator company after deducting $905,815 for depreciation, $25,000 for pensions and setting aside $100,000 for federal taxes, reports that for the three months ending March 31 net earnings of $780,805.

The Chesapeake & Ohio and the Norfolk & Western railways report an increase of coal loadings at Kanawha, W. Va., of 2,407 cars for the week ended today over the previous week. Greater increases are looked for next week because of Judge McClinch's injunction restraining order against union officials' efforts in the New River field.

Stockholders of the American Foreign Trading corporation, which is affiliated with Tobacco Products of the corporation, have approved a plan to reduce the authorized stock from $20,000,000 to $2,000,000, by changing the par value from $100 to $10 a share. There are 194,111 common shares outstanding.

The report of the Erie Railroad to the New York Public Service commission for the quarter ended last December 31 showed a surplus after meeting all charges of $3,547,642, an increase of $3,403,112 over the same period in 1930.

The Union Coal company of California reports net income of $3,140,000 for the quarter ending March 31, after deducting charges for depreciation and federal taxes. Net earnings for the same quarter 1931 were $3,200,000.

Judging Used Car Condition

A Few Simple Tests Reveal Important Facts Concerning It

THE FOLLOWING ARE SOME of the main points to be investigated in determining the mechanical condition of a used car, the purchase of which may be under contemplation: GAS TIGHTNESS OF THE CYLINDERS. I. e., the condition. Poor compression may mean worn out or scored cylinders—a condition that can be remedied only by re-boring and fitting new pistons—while most other results of wear can be overcome by adjustment or the renewal of minor parts. Each cylinder should successfully be hand-cranked, through its compression stroke, preferably with the spark-plugs removed from all cylinders except the one under test. Unless there is a persistent springy resistance to cranking in the case of each cylinder and an absence of a hissing escape of gas, compression cannot be regarded as satisfactory. One takes a serious risk in buying a car with an engine that has cylinders with weak compression. EXCESSIVE WEAR IN THE TRANSMISSION LINE. This can be demonstrated by engaging high speed, turning a jacked up rear wheel, to and fro by hand, and noting whether it can be freely moved to an extent away in excess of the slight amount that is allowable. If it can be it is a reasonable suspicion that the universal joints, the differential or the final-drive gears are seriously worn or at least that some bearings are badly out of adjustment. By watching the universals while the wheel is rocked, serious lost motion there will become apparent. Jerking up and down on the jacked-up wheel will bring to light any serious looseness which may exist in the outboard axle bearing. CONDITION OF THE STEERING GEAR. If the steering wheel can be turned more than three inches, at the rim, without moving the road wheels, considerable wear is indicated. In case the front wheels do not point perceptibly together downwardly, i. e., if they have lost their camber, conditions are not as they should be and if a jacked up front wheel can be shaken noticeably in the yoke end of the axle, the pivot pin and its bushings are seriously worn. A MOMENT'S GLANCE AT THE OUTSIDE BRAKE BANDS will satisfy one as to whether they are still thick and serviceable or whether they are nearly worn down and, in the same way, a look at the wiring will show whether it is in an orderly state or whether it is disarranged and in a patched up condition. Obviously a road demonstration furnishes the best chance to determine operative condition, but the above tests, capable of being made "on the floor," are worth something.

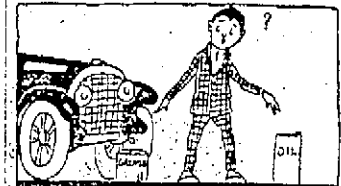

FITTING LARGER VALVES

E. A. B. asks: Will it give my engine more power to install in it the valves used in the engine and, if so, how much? Will the timing have to be changed?

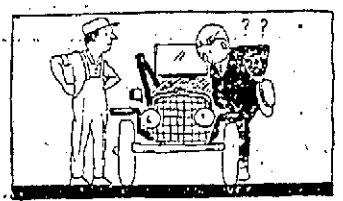

Answer: The valves that you propose to substitute have an area about 15% greater than those now in your engine and they should give a slightly fuller admission and a slightly freer exhaust at extremely high speed, but possibly only at speeds higher than this engine can judiciously be operated. We hardly think that you would notice the difference at slow speed, as when the engine is pulling hard on a hill. You will have to counterbalance the valve seats to a inch larger diameter, ream the valve guides, probably and cut off the valve stems. It would not be necessary to change the timing and you could not do it without obtaining a special camshaft, but a different timing would be better, if you are trying for extremely high speed.

OIL OR GREASE FOR TRANSMISSIONS

H. S. R. writes: My car has a transmission that is designed to be filled with oil. Is this kind as good as that which makes use of grease? Answer: Present-day practice decidedly favors the use of a fluid lubricant rather than a semi-solid one; the principal reason being that oil is more certain to distribute itself over the bearing and gear surfaces than is grease. Grease, if it becomes too stiff, as it does when very cold, is likely to be thrown away from the moving parts and to remain out of contact with them, where it has no lubricating effect, while oil is splashed over all the parts and also spreads actively, by capillary action.
